Dear Sir/Madam,

I am a final year law student at the University of Cape Town and I chose to study law because I cannot see myself in any other profession. I would like to become an attorney because I am passionate about the subject of law and know that as an attorney I will be able to help my future clients when they find themselves in unfortunate situations. I would help them protect and preserve what matters to them, whether it be their assets, relationships, profession, community or their environment. I enjoy solving problems and applying the law to the facts, therefore I know that as a lawyer I would work extremely hard as both my passion and my interests would be fuelled.

Last year I was the Project Leader for the Legal Knowledge and Welfare Organisation (LAWCO) at the University of Cape Town. This project goes out to schools in Mitchell's Plain and in Khayelitsha to run its workshops. In these workshops we taught the school learners various aspects of South African law and about their fundamental human rights. We also informed the learners as to where they could go if they ever need legal advice. These workshops were extremely rewarding and I believe that they were very important because many South Africans do not know that they possess fundamental human rights. This year I am a member of the Constitutional Literacy and Service Initiative (CLASI) which is a project aimed at teaching Constitutional law to high school students at various schools in Cape Town. This project is also aimed at preparing and assisting the learners who will represent their schools in the National Schools Moot Court Competition at the end of the year. I have enjoyed teaching the learners about Constitutional law and as an attorney I intend to carry on educating members of the community with regard to their human rights, as knowledge of this kind is priceless.

I have had part time jobs since I matriculated in 2008 and I truly believe that working makes you appreciate what you have in life. Working has taught me how to maintain a balance between my studies and other activities, which I believe to be a vital element to leading a successful life. Working has also taught me various people skills - how to be patient and how to handle stressful situations.

This year I am doing nine law subjects, four of which are my own choice. I have chosen subjects which interest me and which I would consider specialising in as an attorney. I am also writing a research paper and the topic which I have chosen focuses on Land Reform in South Africa, and more specifically the effects that the current disregard of the 'willing buyer, willing seller' principle will have on the land reform process in South Africa.

I sincerely hope that you will consider my application to do my articles at your law firm in 2014.

Yours faithfully,

MEGAN FARISH

General remarks :

Megan is a quiet, conscientious, self-disciplined and compassionate person. In class she engages fully with the learning process and always gives of her best. She is self-motivated and strives for excellence. Her approach to issues is thoughtful, and she is easily able to express herself in a clear and detailed way. She tends to observe, consider and then give her input into class discussions. Her input is well thought through and her opinions are well considered. Megan is organised and is able to think logically and apply her knowledge in a practical and thorough manner. Her presentation of written work is immaculate and meticulous. Although solitary by nature, she is well-liked by her peers and works well in groups.

Megan has a caring nature and has shown a particular interest in Outreach projects this year. As a member of the very active and successful Outreach portfolio of 2008, she shown maturity, compassion and a quiet strength in working with those less privileged or capable than herself. Megan has given of her time selflessly and is not afraid to go the extra mile for others.
